TELLS OF TURKISH MASSACRE AT WAR ORPHANAGE IN URFA

Miss Margaret Waller, Washington Girl, Herself Wounded, Describes Pillage.

Wounded in a Turkish massacre and ministering to war orphans of Urfa while still suffering from the effects of a bullet wound, Miss Margaret Waller, a Washington girl, daughter of Dr. D. J. Waller, Jr., who has just returned from Turkey, yesterday told of her thrilling experiences at an informal tea given by Mrs. Cabot Stevens at the Women's University Clubhouse.

Miss Waller is home under doctor's orders. A few days after she had obtained permission from Turkish officials to leave for America, she came the order that no one else for the period of two years would be allowed to leave the orphanage in which she was stationed.

A Miss Truax, who accompanied Miss Waller to this country, had not seen a railroad train for two and a half years. Those left behind, said Miss Waller, are in constant fear of massacre by the Turks, and at Urfa war conditions with the attendant horror of Turkish pillage and murder prevail.

Leaving her college more than two years ago, Miss Waller was one of the many Vassar girls who went to Armenia to aid the stricken people in the onrush of the Mohammedans.

Cut off from communication with the outside world for eight months, with bullets from Turkish forces beating upon the building in which she and five other Americans and less than forty adult French and Armenians were imprisoned with 800 orphan children, Miss Waller, wounded and suffering from fever, told of the water supply being given out in sparing cups, a band of trapped Frenchmen fighting to protect the women and children from the much larger force of Turks, and when they had failed, of horrible tortures inflicted upon the soldiers by order of Turkish officials. A parade before the orphanage of Turkish soldiers, bearing aloft the severed heads and hands of French officers, was described by Miss Waller.

While she would say little of her own part in caring for the stricken people, friends of the Washington girl told how she alone went through the enemy lines and at the camp of the commanding officer demanded the rights of organized warfare for the French and saved hundreds from massacre.

BLAMES MILITARY FOR TRAFFIC JAM

Placing the blame for the traffic jam Friday at the Highway Bridge on military authorities on the Virginia side of the bridge, Maj. General, in a prepared statement to the press, yesterday absolved the metropolitan police department from neglect of duty and responsibility for the congestion. Commissioner

Oyster stated that in his opinion the police could not have done more, but he has ordered an investigation. It is reported that President Harding is anxious to find who was responsible for the tie-up at the bridge. Several times when the occupants of his car were put to considerable delay the President expressed his disapproval at the way the situation was handled. Police are blaming the army officials, and the army men are just as vehement in their denunciation of the police.
